WEBSITE WILL PROMOTE PRIZE FOR STUDENTS

Management and technology firm Revell Research Systems has launched a website to promote its student prize at the University of Plymouth. The Exeter-based consultancy established the prize, given to the top final year full-time student on the university's BSc computing degree course, last year to mark its 21st year in business.

The firm's managing consultant Alastair Revell said: "We are hoping that the prize will encourage students on the programme to really excel. I would very much like to wish them all the very best of luck as they approach their final exams this coming term."
