

EASING THE HARDSHIP OF SEPARATION

South West Mediation, the family mediation practice with offices in Torquay, Exeter, Plymouth and Taunton, has just launched its new web site at www.southwestmediation.co.uk.

The firm's new web site explains how mediation can ease the process of separation and divorce. Family mediation helps couples, whether married or not, to discuss and resolve any issues connected with separation or divorce in a thoughtful and co-operative way.

Mediation aims to improve communication and reduce bitterness - and consequently benefit any children involved. The firm does not offer a marriage guidance service and does not seek to keep couples together.

The web site has been designed and built by Revell Research Systems, the management and technology consultancy based in Exeter.

The web site is compliant with important web standards to ensure as many visitors as possible can access it, as well as complying with the recent Companies Act 2006.

Chartered IT professional and managing consultant of Revell Research Systems, Alastair Revell said: "I am really surprised just how few web sites in the region actually comply with web standards or even with the law.

"Quality web sites which are built to web standards are accessible to a wider audience and the owners of web sites which comply with the law obviously face less risk."

John Loram, a director and founder of South West Mediation, whose Torquay office is in Vaughan Parade, remarked on his firm's new web site: "I am really pleased with its design and quality. It is both eye-catching and informative. I think it will be an excellent means for people to find out about our service."
